ABSTRACT

The women constitute half of the world population, perform nearly two thirds of its working hours but still receive only one-tenth of income and one-hundredth of world's property. The gender discrimination is distinct and common in all developing countries in the world. The agricultural wages paid to women are on an average 30-40 per cent less than those of men in India. The women have extensive workloads with dual responsibility for farm in general and livestock and house-hold production in India.

Conclusion

The majority of the beneficiaries obtained microfinance for dairy enterprise were young and middle aged. Many more rural women who come forward to start dairy unit may be extended financial support by the banks. To keep one buffaloes was not sufficient to raise income and employment level. To earn income and generate employment throughout the year few more (one or two) buffaloes should be provided during dry period of animal for the beneficiaries by extending micro finance required based on the performance.

A Good Conclusion :-

Thus, the research have wider scope for new academician and research scholars.
