REVIEW OF THE ARTICLE

Higher Education For A Sustainable Development In India

Mr. Santosh Pandurang Rathod¹ and Prof. K S Malipatil²

ABSTRACT:

The TITLE matches with the contents of the paper This paper argues that in the concept of Higher Education and Sustainable Development has a distinct character focusing Indian education system in 21th century. According to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization's (UNESCO) Education is the basis for a Sustainable Development. It has become a social process of construction of a pedagogical object, plural, as full of contradictions as reality itself.

INTRODUCTION:

Author introduced the topic neatly and clearly The United Nations (UN) Decade of Education for Sustainable Development (DESD) 2005-2014 states that 'Universities must function as places of research and learning for sustainable development. The government of the United Kingdom has answered in the affirmative. It's Department for Education and Skills "shares responsibility for learning about sustainable development."

METHODOLOGY:

Author has not mentioned any specific methodology. This study was descriptive in nature. Must add methodology in your article. Methodology used to per research topic.

PRESENTATION OF RESULTS:

The amount of data presented was sufficient and appropriate. Tables, graphs, or figures were used judiciously and agree with the text This short survey of the current activities of some HEIs across 12 OECD member countries shows that universities have made progress on sustainable development, particularly environmental aspects, in spite of the lack of a national legislative framework. However, as noted in the introduction, experience within the UK teaches that even the most committed institution will find it difficult to progress without external factors and policy being addressed. Despite the varied examples and activity, HEIs focused mainly on environmental aspects and had limited activity in social or economic aspects of sustainable development.

REFERENCES:

RELEVANCE:

The paper is properly organized and demands appreciation. I think the paper will satisfy the interest of the readers.
