

IMPACT OF GLOBALIZATION ON SOCIAL TRANSFORMATION-A SOCIAL WORK PERSPECTIVE

Mr. Pradeep B. S.

Assistant Professor, Department of studies in Social work,
Davanagere University, Shivagangotri, Davanagere District, Karnataka, India

ABSTRACT

The world is undergoing important social transformations driven by the impact of globalization, global environmental change and economic and financial crises, resulting in growing inequalities, extreme poverty, exclusion and the denial of basic human rights. These transformations demonstrate the urge for innovative solutions conducive to universal values of peace, human dignity, gender equality and non-violence and non-discrimination. Young women and men, who are the most affected by these changes, are hence the principal key-actors of social transformations. The social dimension of globalization refers to the impact of globalization on the life and work of people, on their families, and their societies. Concerns and issues are often raised about the impact of globalization on employment, working conditions, income and social protection.

Social transformation is closely linked to globalization. It is therefore important to have a clear idea of the meaning of this concept. At the most general level, globalization refers to a process of change which affects all regions of the world in a variety of sectors including the economy, technology, politics, the media, culture and the environment. Globalization brings reorganization at the international, national, and sub-national levels. Specifically, it brings the reorganization of production, international trade, and the integration of financial markets. ... Globalization is now seen as marginalizing the less educated and low-skilled workers.

Keywords: Globalization, Social Transformation, Environmental Change, Human Rights, Innovation.

INTRODUCTION

Globalization came to India through the economic reforms and is gradually transforming our culture and self image. ... Social reform has lagged behind economic reform. The paradigm shift in the Indian planning from growth with stability and social justice to neo-liberal development is traced. Globalization brings new potentials for development and wealth creation. But there are divergent views and perceptions among people as concerns its economic and social impact, and indeed widely varying impacts on the interests and opportunities of different sectors and economic and social actors.

Globalization is a term that is used in many ways, but the principal underlying idea is the progressive integration of economies and societies. It is driven by new technologies, new economic relationships and the national and international policies of a wide range of actors, including governments, international organizations, business, labor and civil society.

Broadly speaking, the process of globalization has two aspects. The first refers to those factors - such as trade, investment, technology, cross-border production systems, flows of information and communication which bring societies and citizens closer together.

The second refers to policies and institutions, such as trade and capital market liberalization, international standards for labor, the environment, corporate behaviour and other issues, agreements on intellectual property rights, and other policies pursued at both the national and international level which support the integration of economies and countries. In terms of the latter aspect, the existing pattern of globalization is not an inevitable trend - it is at least in part the product of policy choices. While technological change is irreversible, policies can be changed. Technological advances have also widened the policy choices available.

The social dimension of globalization refers to the impact of globalization on the life and work of people, on their families, and their societies. Concerns and issues are often raised about the impact of globalization on employment, working conditions, income and social protection. Beyond the world of work, the social dimension encompasses security, culture and identity, inclusion or exclusion and the cohesiveness of families and communities.

“Globalization as a concept refers both to the compression of the world and the intensification of consciousness of the world as a whole both concrete global interdependence and consciousness of global whole in the twentieth century”.

Operational definition:

Globalization: Globalization is the word used to describe the growing interdependence of the world's economies, cultures, and populations, brought about by cross-border trade in goods and services, technology, and flows of investment, people, and information.

Social transformation: Societal transformation refers to “a deep and sustained, nonlinear systemic change”. In society. Transformational changes can occur within a particular system, such as a city, a transport or energy system. Societal transformations can also refer to changes of an entire culture or civilization.

Globalization and Social Change

Globalization has benefits that cover various regions. It proportionally created economies all around the world and expanded social trades. It likewise permitted monetary trades between organizations, changing the worldview of work. Many individuals are these days residents of the world. Globalization is related with fast and critical human changes. The developments of individuals from country to metropolitan regions have sped up, and the development of urban communities in the creating scene particularly is connected to unacceptable living for some. Family interruption and social and abusive behavior at home are expanding.

There are three types of globalization.

- Economic globalization. Here, the focus is on the integration of international financial markets and the coordination of financial exchange. ...
- Political globalization. ...
- Cultural globalization.

Concerns and issues are often raised about the impact of globalization on employment, working conditions, income and social protection. ... Some argue that the present model of globalization has exacerbated problems of unemployment, inequality and poverty, while others contend that globalization helps to reduce them.

Factors of Change

- Physical Environment: Major changes in the physical environment are very compelling when they happen. ...
- Population changes: ...
- Isolation and Contact: ...
- Social Structure: ...
- Attitudes and Values: ...
- Technological Factors:

Globalization and social work

Globalization significantly affects social work on, changing assistance conveyance; adjusting the work interaction for proficient social specialists; making new friendly issues for professionals to address, for example, individuals dealing and natural issues; and delivering requests for indigenization, or the advancement of area explicit types of hypothesis and practice. This article thinks about globalization with regards to these issues and the effect of the current monetary emergency on an all the more firmly associated and reliant world. It likewise investigates the job of the state in these turns of events and considers the ramifications of these for social work practice in the 21st century

Social change and social work

Social Change and Social Work talks about and looks at how friendly work is tested by friendly, political and monetary propensities happening in current social orders. The creators ask how friendly work as a discipline and practice is experiencing worldwide and nearby changes. Partitioned into three sections, themes covered incorporate the changing social work order since forever ago; social work ideal models and hypothetical contemplations; phenomenological social work; practice examination; and orientation and generational exploration. Taken together, the parts in this compilation give a legitimate and cutting-edge outline of flow conversations inside the European social work research local area.

CONCLUSION:

Concerns and issues are often raised about the impact of globalization on employment, working conditions, income and social protection. ... Some argue that the present model of globalization has exacerbated problems of unemployment, inequality and poverty, while others contend that globalization helps to reduce them.

Social transformation is closely linked to globalization. It is therefore important to have a clear idea of the meaning of this concept. At the most general level, globalization refers to a process of change which affects all regions of the world in a variety of sectors including the economy, technology, politics, the media, culture and the environment. Globalization brings reorganization at the international, national, and sub-national levels. Specifically, it brings the reorganization of production, international trade, and the integration of financial markets. ... Globalization is now seen as marginalizing the less educated and low-skilled workers.

Reference:

1. <https://en.unesco.org/themes/social-transformations>
2. International Journal of Sociology and Anthropology Vol. 3(8), pp. 253-260, August 2011 Available online <http://www.academicjournals.org/IJSA> ISSN 2006-988x ©2011 Academic Journals
3. World commission on the social dimensions of globalization
4. Y. Gurappa Naidu The Indian Journal of Political Science Vol. 67, No. 1 (JAN. - MAR., 2006), pp. 65-76 (12 pages) Published By: Indian Political Science Association
5. Prakash s. Kattimani impact of globalization on Indian society: an overview. Indian j. Soc. & pol. 04(01):2017:63-66
6. <https://journals.sagepub.com/doi/abs/10.1177/030981680308100117?journalCode=cnca>